March 2017

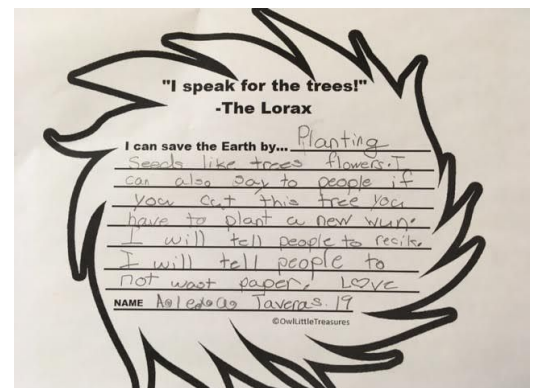

We celebrated Dr. Seuss all month, working around the book fair and our two (!) consecutive snow days. I decided to read a lesser-known Dr. Seuss work that was published after his death: Hooray for Diffendoofer Day! The story is actually quite timely—a school with unique, offbeat teachers and curriculum suddenly must give their students a big test, and the poor principal worries that students are not prepared. If the students don't pass the test, the school will close and they will have to attend a boring, cookie-cutter school where there is no individuality. We also read The Lorax, discussed preserving our environment, and the specific steps we can take to reduce, reuse and recycle.

Kindergarten, 1st and Communication Skills also colored and cut cool Lorax-type mustaches :)

Third, fourth and fifth grade also completed an online Q&A to learn about St. Patrick's Day and it's history.
